

The Straits Times: Wednesday, October 29, 2003

JOSE ENRIQUE SORIANO

COMING OUT TOPS:

A team of scientists from Singapore has clinched the top prize in the Asian Innovation Awards. The group, comprising (from left) Dr Allen Yeoh, consultant with the National University Hospital; Professor Limsoon Wong, deputy executive director at the Institute for Infocomm Research (I2R); Dr Li Jinyan, I2R associate lead scientist; and Ms Liu Huiqing, I2R scientist, came up with a method to diagnose childhood leukaemia effectively. Organised by the Far Eastern Economic Review, the awards drew 142 entries from the region.